

Parent Care Can Be Challenging Especially from Overseas

Binocular Vision serves English speaking people of any nationality

Caregiver-related stress can have a significant negative impact on an individual's family life, work performance and overall health. Companies that view their employees' eldercare challenges as a risk to be managed, can reduce the toll caregiver stress takes on overall corporate productivity.

Binocular Vision works with individuals concerned about long distance parent care and with global organizations wanting to help employees handle the challenge of caring for aging parents.

It can suddenly become too late, but it is never too early to talk with parents about the future

Most aging parents and their children do want to talk about the future, but don't know how.

Binocular Vision offers guidance for individuals

- Educating themselves about the eldercare challenges they and their parents face
- Learning about eldercare resources near parents and how to access them
- Engaging parents in meaningful conversations about the future

We help children partner with parents to establish plans for the future

- Honoring parents' dignity, autonomy and right to self-determination
- Safeguarding the financial and emotional wellbeing of the entire family

Talking with parents about their plans for the future

Being a parent's best eldercare advocate

Building a support system where parents live

Planning ahead for handling a parent care emergency

OUR SERVICES help individuals

- Cope with eldercare from overseas and experience more peace of mind about aging parents
- Be more prepared to handle a parent's accident, acute illness, or "turn for the worse"
- Assist parents in planning for the future they want to experience as they age

OUR PROGRAMS for employees and their spouses help global companies

- Reduce the risk and expense of early or unplanned employee repatriation
- Retain seasoned professionals at the peak of their careers
- Maintain executive productivity, creativity and focus

Binocular Vision Advisors and Marcia Johnson

As part of a generation ill prepared for its eldercare role, in 2003 Marcia Johnson launched Binocular Vision to help families connect with eldercare resources and services. Binocular Vision works with English speaking people caring for aging parents from abroad, and with global organizations that employ people who care for their elders. Through programs for groups and consulting with individuals, Binocular Vision provides actionable information that can help people handle parent care.
